

Enserva ready to help the federal government meet Canada's energy potential

April 29, 2025 – Enserva issued the following statement following the Canadian Federal Election:

“We would like to express our appreciation to all candidates who ran in the 2025 election. We congratulate Prime Minister Mark Carney on his election victory, and all candidates who were elected to Parliament last night. Enserva offers its support in helping the federal government meet Prime Minister Carney's election promise ‘to make Canada the world's leading energy superpower’.

A prosperous energy sector means prosperity for all Canadians. We have what Canada and the world needs: responsibly developed, reliable, and abundant energy. Developing our resources and building the infrastructure to get them to our ports for export means more Canadian jobs, more revenue to the Canadian economy, a lower global carbon footprint, more Indigenous participation in our national economy and prosperous communities from coast to coast to coast.

But to truly become an energy superpower, the Government of Canada needs regulatory and policy frameworks that attract investment, encourage development, enable growth, and remove barriers to competitiveness. As the voice of Canada's energy service, supply, and manufacturing sector, Enserva stands ready to engage constructively with all governments on key issues that impact our members to help them understand what the energy industry needs to meet its full potential.

Across this campaign, one thing was clear: Canadians are listening. The need for secure, reliable, and responsibly developed energy is gaining traction in the national conversation. There is a real opportunity to reset the narrative and advance practical, competitive solutions that support Canadian jobs, innovation, and prosperity.

Enserva's members fuel the Canadian economy. We are the boots on the ground, employing talented men and women across this country. We stand ready to help Canada become the world's leading energy superpower.”
